New Orleans and the 21st Annual Conference of the Society for Social Work and Research (SSWR)! This year’s scientific meeting will be especially exciting for several reasons:

At the 2016 annual conference, we celebrated the history of SSWR and our partnership with the American Academy of Social Work and Social Welfare to formally launch the Grand Challenges for Social Work. Over the past year there has been much discourse in our profession regarding the potential for the Grand Challenges of Social Work Initiative and their impact on major social issues in our country and their implications for the profession. The SSWR Board and the Conference Planning Committee decided that the “Ensure Healthy Development for all Youth” Grand Challenge would be the theme for our 21st Annual Conference. This year’s conference theme, “Ensure Healthy Development for all Youth,” engages our profession in important issues and questions around prevention and investments in the future of our society. The SSWR’s annual conference has become an important scientific meeting for our profession. It is a leading venue for scientific exchange, advancement and connection of social work researchers at all career levels.

Vice President and Conference Chair Diane DePanfilis and the Conference Planning Committee have assembled an exciting four days of intellectually stimulating programming. Offerings include the Thursday morning Research Methods Workshops and Special Sessions on Research Priorities and Capacity Building; excellent invited and peer-reviewed sessions, a wonderful Presidential Plenary by Reverend Jeffrey Brown, Pastor and President of RECAP (Rebuilding Every Community Around Peace), and the Opening Plenary session by Dr. Gerald Mallon, Hunter College.

Our program also features the highly regarded Aaron Rosen Lecture, delivered this year by Dr. Enola Proctor, Washington University in St. Louis, and a broad range of high quality workshops, roundtables, symposia, papers and ePosters that advance knowledge in social work practice and policy. New this year are the inaugural Brief and Brilliant session and two Research Capacity Development Committee (RCDC) sessions.

As is always the case, this year’s conference was enriched by suggestions and input from many SSWR members. We are extremely grateful for the support received from social work education programs and national organizations. Acknowledgements and thanks will appear on the SSWR website, on signage prominently displayed at the conference, in the conference app, and the printed program. We owe a debt of gratitude for conference planning and logistical support to staffers Jennifer Lewis and DeeJay Garringo, and to Bill Haire and Patty Couch at Travelink. Their constant support and meticulous attention to detail allows SSWR to provide its members with an outstanding conference every year.

We are also most grateful to our many institutional partners and friends. The development of the Society over the years would not have been possible without the tremendous support from the many distinguished social work researchers comprising the membership of the Society, the leadership of graduate and undergraduate social work degree programs, and collaborative social work organizations including the National Association of Social Workers, the Council on Social Work Education, the Association of Baccalaureate Social Work Program Directors, the Group for the Advancement of Doctoral Education in Social Work, the National Association of Deans and Directors, the St. Louis Group for Excellence in Research and Education, and the American Academy of Social Work and Social Welfare.

On behalf of the entire SSWR Board of Directors, thank you for attending this year’s conference in New Orleans. Have fun!

James Herbert Williams, PhD, MSW
President
SSWR Board of Directors

Presidential Plenary Speaker

Rev. Jeffrey Brown was one of the key architects behind the “Boston Miracle,” which saw the violent crime rate among youth plummet by 79% over a decade. Today, he works with faith groups, cities, government, and police to stop gang violence as the president of RECAP and co-founder of My City at Peace. He speaks on “collaborative leadership,” community building, and what it takes to institute real change in organizations of all stripes.

At TED 2015, Rev. Jeffrey Brown’s keynote garnered a standing ovation—and has since been viewed over 1 million times. Rev. Brown is currently the president of RECAP, which stands for Rebuilding Every Community Around Peace. He is also a co-founder of the Boston Ten Point Coalition, a faith-based group that was an integral part of the famous “Boston Miracle,” during which the city experienced a 79% decline in violent crime among youth from 1990 to 1999. The efforts also spawned countless urban collaborative efforts in subsequent years, and was widely covered in the press.

Rev. Brown consults municipalities and police departments (and policing initiatives) nationwide on issues around youth violence and community mobilization. He helps rebuild trust between neighborhoods and police departments, speaking with officers to strengthen their ties to the communities they serve. He has worked with the US State Department on Countering Violent Extremism (CVE) initiatives, based on his nationally recognized success with developing robust violence prevention and intervention strategies. As part of the Society for Organizational Learning North America, Rev. Brown also assists the World Bank, IMF, and IFC with senior leadership development and learning, teaching cutting-edge models for leadership, problem solving, flexibility, and adaptability.

As co-founder of My City at Peace—a community-based, collaborative organization that builds alliances between conflicting constituencies to find peace and end violence—Rev. Brown has also been working with housing authorities to rebuild communities in distressed areas and avoid the more damaging effects of gentrification. In order to attract buyers, while still retaining low-income residents, Brown argues for a combination of market-rate, affordable, and Section 8 housing.

Enola Proctor’s teaching and research are motivated by the question, how do we ensure that people receive the very best possible care? She has studied this question in a variety of social work, public health, and health care settings, ranging from hospitals to community agencies. She has contributed to the intellectual capital for the rapidly growing field of dissemination and implementation science, leading teams to distinguish, clearly define, develop taxonomies, and stimulate more systematic work to advance the conceptual, linguistic, and methodological clarity in the field. Her recent studies address how organizations and individual providers can adopt, deliver, and sustain evidence based programs and interventions.

Her research has been funded by the NIMH, the NIA, and AHRQ. She directs the Implementation Research Institute, a national training program in implementation science funded by the National Institute for Mental Health. She leads the Dissemination and Implementation Research Core for Washington University’s CTSA program, as well as other University dissemination and implementation research centers and cores. She directs the Center for Mental Health Services Research at Washington University, launched and supported for 20 years with NIMH support. She is PI and Director of a doctoral and post-doctoral training program (T32), now in its 23rd year of continuous NIMH funding. She served on the NIMH National Advisory Council and an Institute of Medicine Committee on Evidence-Based Standards for Psychosocial Interventions. She is lead implementation scientist for a World Health Organization research training MOOC for neglected tropical diseases of poverty. She is a founding member of the American Academy of Social Work and Social Welfare, was Editor-in-Chief of Social Work Research, and is a fellow of SSWR. She has received numerous teaching and mentoring awards from Washington University in St. Louis, and SSWR’s Distinguished Research Award in 2002.

Benbenishty has developed a conceptual, methodological, and technological framework for monitoring processes and outcomes in human services. This framework was implemented in foster care services in the US and is being utilized to monitor school violence and climate in schools, districts, and at the national level.

With his colleague, Ron Avi Astor from USC, he is studying multiple aspects of school climate and victimization. He has conducted a series of studies that examined school violence from an ecological perspective. The insights gained from this work contributed to an ecological theory of school violence in context and to consultation with several educational systems around the world.

In all these area of research, Benbenishty has conducted multiple international comparative studies, that aim to identify what is common and what is unique across contexts. He is consulting with governments and researchers in many places around the world.

Benbenishty is an advocate for children’s rights. He has served on numerous public committees that addressed children’s needs and rights. He consults regularly with government agencies and appears on national media to speak for Jewish and Arab children in Israel.

Benbenishty has published numerous papers, book chapters, books and technical reports. His work has been recognized and he received multiple awards including France’s Chevalier des Ordre de Palmes Academique (Knight in the Order of Academic Palms), SSWR Excellence in Research Award, Israel’s Landau Prize for Research and Science, and most recently, Israel’s prestigious EMET Prize for Science, Art, and Culture.
Irrespective of complex, but necessary, IRB issues, engaging youth in research inquiry requires unique skills that some researchers may not have fully considered. The engagement of youth as partners in research and evaluation efforts is relatively new. The underlying philosophy of the positive youth development movement has influenced scholars and practitioners to include youth as partners in the design and implementation of research involving issues that affect their lives. Engaging youth in research and evaluation not only generates useful knowledge for communities and individuals but also provides opportunities for the development and empowerment of youth participants, leading to benefits for young people, organizations, the broader community, and the research process.

Utilizing the voices of young people from child welfare, juvenile justice, and school systems, this plenary will facilitate a dialogue between young people and researchers to encourage and provoke thoughtful examination of the core issues that researchers should consider when engaging youth in scholarly inquiry.

“Nothing About Us, Without Us: Youth Speak Out About What Researchers Should Know About Youth”
Thursday, January 12, 2017
5:00 pm – 6:30 pm
Carondelet, Third Floor

Behavioral health problems in childhood and adolescence take a heavy individual, social, and economic toll on millions of lives. These problems range widely—from anxiety and depression to alcohol, tobacco, and drug abuse; delinquent and violent behavior; dropping out of school; and risky sexual activity and unwanted pregnancies. For decades, the approach to behavioral health problems was to treat them only after they were identified— at a high and ongoing cost to young people, families, and communities. Strong evidence from the past three decades indicates that we can prevent many behavioral health problems before they emerge. In this session, members of the Coalition for the Promotion of Behavioral Health discuss advances in prevention science and outline the goals and strategies of Unleashing the Power of Prevention, an action plan aimed at increasing the use of tested and effective preventive interventions for young people from birth to age 24. Unleashing the Power of Prevention is a central component of the American Academy of Social Work and Social Welfare’s Grand Challenge of Ensure Healthy Development for all Youth.

“Roadmap to Resilience for Youth of Color”
Saturday, January 14, 2017, 9:45 am – 11:15 am
Carondelet, Third Floor

Low-income or resource-poor, urban and rural environments present a number of risk factors leading to deleterious outcomes for youth of color, including school truancy and dropout, compromised physical and behavior health statuses including substance abuse, sexual risk-taking behaviors, or gang involvement. Intervention programs to address these risk factors are plentiful; yet, there is some ways to go to ensure the effectiveness of these approaches across a host of outcomes for youth of color. We will host a panel discussion, via a 90-minute talk show format with follow-up Q & A, to share in the collective wisdom of key scholars whose research address important challenges in intervention science and programing targeting youth of color. In particular, this panel will: (1) Discuss the positive and successful programs that promote development in youth of color and learn how these existing programs can be further innovative to promote sustained success; (2) explore how existing programs might accommodate different environments and communities (suburban, rural; immigrant/refugee; “ethnic”); (3) identify the problems, whether environmental, social, or on the part of systematic failures in the program itself, that hinder the success of youth of color; and (4) promote public, academic, and professional advocacy for successful and positive existing programs through engaged exploration and dialogue.

Invited Symposium III

“School, University, and Community Collaborations to Build Resilience and Improve Children’s Health: The Homewood Approach”
Saturday, January 14, 2017, 2:00 pm – 3:30 pm
Carondelet, Third Floor

The focus of this session is on how school, community, and university partners can collaborate to support high needs communities in efforts to ameliorate and ultimately eliminate, disparities in children’s health. The presenter, Professor John Wallace, School of Social Work, Katz School of Business, and Department of Sociology – University of Pittsburgh, will discuss current collaborations between the University of Pittsburgh’s Pitt-Assisted Community Schools (PACS) program, the Homewood Children’s Village Community Schools Initiative, and three collaborating Title 1 public schools in the Homewood neighborhood of Pittsburgh. The session will detail various aspects of, leading, designing and executing this collaboration that leverages community school supports and university resources in order to provide a pipeline of full-service programming that promotes resilience and health among one of the city’s highest need populations.
Research has established a strong correlation between poverty and both child maltreatment and child protective services (CPS) involvement. Recent evidence suggests that these associations are in fact causal. In this second year of the SSWR Social Policy Forum, faculty researcher Lawrence Berger and practitioner Stacie Leblanc have a conversation about the implications of this finding for child welfare policy and services. In a combination of presentation, dialogue, and audience Q&A, they consider what engaging in “poverty-informed” child welfare practice would mean for the child welfare system and for the reduction of racial disparities throughout it.
Building student and early career scholars’ research capacity is not predicated on the one-way transmission and passive receipt of concrete skills and knowledge. Instead, research capacity development occurs through the ongoing exchange and refinement of questions, ideas, and strategies. Mentors play an undeniably critical role this process, serving as a primary conduit to essential tangible resources (funding, space, equipment, supplies) and equally vital intangible opportunities (knowledge and training, presentations and publications, professional networking and career advice). Ideally, this relationship is mutually fruitful, insofar as it stimulates new ideas and results in shared products, and mutually meaningful, insofar as it provides mentors with outlets for generativity and mentees with sources of guidance. The expert insight from this session’s invited participants will help ground and guide a roundtable conversation of the mechanics, chemistry, and promise of mentoring for social work research and researchers. Specific points for discussion include: mentoring – and being mentored – as a skillset; diverse forms and types of mentors, including natural mentors and peer mentors; the impact of mentoring networks on the lives and careers of minority-status researchers; and the intellectual and professional value of mentoring across disciplines.

The purpose of this roundtable, co-sponsored by SSWR’s Research Capacity Development Committee and the Group for the Advancement of Doctoral Education in Social Work (GADE), will be to discuss how the dissertation fits within the shifting landscape of social work research, and whether alternative dissertation formats might be an option for aligning social work doctoral education with twenty-first century social work research. The roundtable presenters will first discuss the strengths and limitations of the traditional dissertation in the current context. Many other fields have embraced alternative dissertation formats, and the alternative dissertation is the focus of much debate in national organizations, such as the Council on Graduate Schools. The roundtable presenters will discuss examples of the range of alternative dissertation formats, explore how these formats fit with the research capacity development needs of social work PhD students, and discuss implications of alternative dissertation formats for twenty-first century social work research. The roundtable will provide an opportunity for a lively discourse among attendees, and for doctoral students, doctoral educators and others to share their own perspectives on the future of the doctoral dissertation in social work education.
2017 Society for Social Work and Research (SSWR) Fellows

Congratulations to the 2017 class of SSWR Fellows! SSWR Fellow is an honor to recognize current SSWR members for their individual accomplishments, leadership, and contribution to SSWR as a scientific society. SSWR Fellows serve as role models and mentors for individuals pursuing careers in social work research and help advance the mission of the Society for Social Work and Research “…to advance, disseminate, and translate research that addresses issues of social work practice and policy and promotes a diverse, just, and equitable society.”

Admission to Conference Activities

You MUST wear your conference nametag to be admitted to all program sessions, e.g. workshops, symposia, oral papers, poster presentations, and the exhibit hall. The Conference Registration Desk will be open throughout most of the conference.

Admission to all award presentations and receptions also requires your nametag. Please drop by the Conference Registration Desk located Acadia Foyer, 3rd Floor, if you would like to register your spouse/guest to attend a reception. Spouse/guest(s) who would like to attend presentations/sessions are required to pay the full conference registration fee.

Continuing Education Units (CEUs)

The SSWR workshops, roundtables, papers, symposia, plenary sessions, and all Thursday morning research methods workshops and special sessions on research priorities and capacity building meet requirements for continuing education units (CEUs) for social workers approved by the National Association of Social Workers (NASW). Please note, however, that not all states accept NASW-approved CEUs. We strongly advise you to check with the organization that is responsible for your state licensing that NASW-approved CEUs are acceptable by your state. To receive CEUs, at the conclusion of the conference, a Participant Attendance Monitoring Form must be completed and submitted by the CEU applicant to the Membership/ CEU Desk located in the Acadia Foyer, 3rd Floor, no later than Sunday, January 15, 2017, 1:30 pm. No partial credit will be awarded – participants must remain through entire sessions to receive credit. The number of CEUs is dependent on the number of sessions attended at the meeting. Please note it is NASW policy that oral paper presenters, workshop and roundtable speakers, symposium organizers, discussants, and symposium paper presenters may not receive credit from the session in which they are participating. There is a $25 CEU certificate fee (non-refundable) to cover costs incurred by SSWR and NASW. CEU certificates will be emailed to you by SSWR a minimum of eight (8) weeks after the conference has concluded. No CEU forms will be available or accepted after the conference ends.

Special Assistance

Any attendees who desire special assistance with accessing or participating in conference activities should provide such requests to the staff at the Conference Registration Desk. Please do so at the earliest opportunity so that necessary arrangements can be made. Hearing impaired requests must have been submitted prior to December 9, 2016 in order to make arrangements for interpretive services.

Cover Design

Artwork provided by students in PS 59 (New York City) through the Mentoring USA/ Bloomingdale’s partnership to support all youth to reach their potential.

Message Board/Internet Access

A message board will be located near the Registration Area in the Acadia Foyer, 3rd Floor. The New Orleans Marriott Hotel provides complimentary Wi-Fi in their lobby and public areas. Attendees who make their reservations through SSWR’s website or call the New Orleans Marriott Hotel are eligible to receive free Guest Room internet as long as SSWR occupies 80% of their contracted room block.

“Going Green” Campaign

SSWR is making a concerted effort towards more sustainable, eco-friendly and socially-responsible practices at the Annual Conference. To continue our efforts to reduce the environmental impacts of the conference, the SSWR Conference Mobile App first introduced in 2014 has been enhanced for 2017 based on conference attendees’ feedback. In 2017, complimentary Wi-Fi will be available in SSWR’s conference meeting spaces (attendees staying at the New Orleans Marriott hotel will receive complimentary Wi-Fi in their guest rooms). When you register for the 2017 conference, you have the option to decline receiving the printed program onsite. We encourage you to select this option. To continue SSWR’s “going green” campaign, please note we will transition to a paper free/mobile app-only conference in 2019. We hope you join us in our “going green” efforts!

Conference Mobile APP

SSWR is pleased to announce the CONFERENCE MOBILE APP for the SSWR 2017 conference is now available for conference participants. The Conference Mobile APP (hosted by TripBuilder Media) enables participants to search or browse presentations/sessions and speakers, create their itinerary of sessions and events to attend and integrate to their calendar. Directions on how to pinpoint the various locations of all conference events is also available within the app. You will also be able to hashtag the SSWR 2017 conference via Twitter using “sswr2017”.

To download the Conference Mobile App, plug www.tripbuildermedia.com/apps/sswr2017 into your mobile device’s browser or search “SSWR 2017” on the Apple App Store or Google Play Store. This link will automatically detect your mobile type and take you to the right place to download the app. If you have any questions or need technical assistance, click on the “Help” icon within the app.

From time to time, SSWR will take photos of conference events and reserves the right to use these photographs in its promotional materials. Unless this permission is revoked in writing to SSWR, by virtue of their attendance all conference participants agree to the use of their likeness in such materials.

RMW-1 Health Equity through Knowledge Democracy— Balconies I
Rationale and Methods in Community Based Participatory Research
Bonnie Durran, MPH, DrPH (University of Washington)

Community Based Participatory Research (CBPR) and other forms of community-engaged research (CenR) has received growing attention in fields like social work, public health, education, nursing, sociology, etc, over the past several decades. Increasingly, academic-community partnerships are at the forefront of strategies to improving social and health status for vulnerable populations. As defined by the Kellogg Foundation, CBPR is a "collaborative approach to research that equitably involves all partners in the research process and recognizes the unique strengths that each brings. CBPR begins with a research topic of importance to the community with the aim of combining knowledge and action for social change." It is an overall orientation to research, which fundamentally changes the relationship between researchers and researched. With roots in popular education in Third World nations of Latin America, Asia and Africa, and in other traditions of action and participatory action research, it has been applied in the U.S., Canada and elsewhere in a range of disciplines and settings. The goal of this workshop is to provide participants with a general overview of theories, principles and strategies of CenR and CBPR, and an appreciation of advantages and limitations of these approaches. The presenter will present empirical evidence for current guidelines and standards for CenR and CBPR approaches across diverse populations.

RMW-2

InDiGiqualitative Research Methods: Incorporating Indigenous Science into Social Work Qualitative Research Methods Training

Ramona Beltran, PhD (University of Denver)

Indigenous science and corresponding art and media-based qualitative methods holds the potential to offer deeply contextualized and nuanced data gathering strategies and responses to pressing social issues in Indigenous and other marginalized communities. As such, it may help provide more complex and holistic understanding of social problems and effective solutions to pressing community health and wellness needs. This workshop is designed to provide participants with a foundation for advanced qualitative research methods with Indigenous and other diverse communities through using arts-based inquiry, visual praxis, storytelling, and interpretive methods for collecting and analyzing data. In her landmark book, Decolonizing Methodologies, Linda Tuhiwai Smith (1999) describes qualitative research as particularly responsive to Indigenous communities because “it has the potential to respond to epistemic challenges and crises, to unravel and weave, to fold in and unmask the layers of the social life and depth of human experience” (p. 103) by challenging representations, contextualizing and sharing storylines, and making meaning from “complex and shifting experiences, identities, and realities” (p. 103). Grounded in an Indigenous epistemological framework applied across intersectional and diverse communities, participants will explore how to rigorously investigate deeply contextualized questions about individual and social phenomena. Consistent with Indigenous ways of knowing, self-reflexive praxis and location of self in relation to community and knowledge will be prioritized as qualitative questions are developed and considered.

RMW-3

Getting Connected to fMRI Technology and Methodology in Social Work Research

Jessica Black, PhD (Boston College), Shaun M. Eack, PhD (University of Pittsburgh)

This workshop aims to build an understanding and application of functional magnetic resonance imaging (fMRI) for social work researchers. fMRI provides a non-invasive measure of brain structure and function, and is the leading functional neuroimaging technology in cognitive neuroscience research. Social work adheres to the biopsychosocial model of development yet the biological domain is frequently excluded from study designs. Neuroscientific research within the social sciences has grown considerably, and this direction presents exciting and innovative opportunities for social work researchers. Recent advancements in functional neuroimaging provides a complimentary and unique vantage point to understand, define and build cutting-edge social work interventions to improve conditions for clients and society. Importantly, extramural funding agencies, such as the NIH, seek interdisciplinary proposals that can integrate the biological and psychosocial underpinnings of health and disease.

RMW-4

Longitudinal and Multi-level Modelling Using R

Din Chen, PhD (University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill)

This workshop presents the concepts and intuition for longitudinal and multilevel modeling with detailed step-by-step illustrations and implementation using free software R. Based on more than 20 years’ teaching and research experience, I will start with an overview of the well-known regression models for their pitfalls and biases if used to analysis data with longitudinal and multilevel structure and I then introduce how to analyze longitudinal and multilevel data appropriately in a step-by-step fashion implemented in free software R. I will briefly review the R so that the participants are not required to have prior knowledge on R. At the completion of the workshop, participants will have a solid understanding of the challenges and problems in longitudinal and multilevel modelling (including two-level and three-level hierarchical linear models). In addition, participants are able to follow the logic steps and examples in the workshop to analyze their own data.
Special Sessions on Research Priorities and Capacity Building

These training-oriented sessions target cutting-edge topics vital to contemporary social work research.

8:00 am - 10:00 am

SSRPCB-1 Developing Successful Minority Social Work Scholars
Ruth McRoy, PhD (Boston College), Rowena Fong, EdD, Yolanda C. Padilla, PhD (University of Texas at Austin), Renee M. Cunningham-Williams, PhD (Washington University in Saint Louis), Carol M. Lewis, PhD (University of Texas at Austin)

This interactive session is designed for deans and directors, faculty, doctoral students, and others interested in building a pool of successful minority researchers in social work. It will include a discussion of 1) specific strategies for mentoring and training future scholars, 2) building research infrastructure and capacity to enhance their success, 3) developing transdisciplinary and cross-university connections to increase the likelihood of successful grant collaborations, 4) enhancing community agency/university research partnerships and 5) applying translational research strategies in communities participating in research. In addition, the panel will discuss strategies to stimulate funding support for social work research as well as tools for addressing administrative challenges in grant submission and the implementation process. Grand challenges for social work emphasize developing and supporting faculty at all levels. Faculty of color have particular obstacles that call for more discussion. Examples of successful minority scholars will be provided.

SSRPCB-2 Designing and Developing Culturally-Grounded, Community-Based Research From Within Our Own Communities: Challenges and Strengths
Darrell Wheeler, PhD (State University of New York at Albany), Michael Spencer, PhD (University of Michigan-Ann Arbor), Debora Ortega, PhD (University of Denver), Tessa Evans-Campbell, PhD (University of Washington)

The National Institutes of Health (NIH)-commissioned Institute of Medicine report on the health of lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender (LGBT) people identified research recommendations and a need for more and improved data and information focused on sexual and gender minorities (SGM). Responding to this call, NIH took several steps to address the recommendations and increase SGM-related research. This presentation will describe the current activities of NIH, including the work of the Sexual & Gender Minority Research Office (SGMRO). We will describe SGM research at NIH and the types of projects that are funded pertaining to sexual and gender minorities using FY2015 data. We will also look at trans-NIH efforts of the SGMRO, including the NIH SGM Research Coordinating Committee, as well as collaborations with other federal agencies through the HHS LGBT Issues Coordinating Committee, and the Federal Interagency Working Group for Measuring Sexual Orientation and Gender Identity. Finally, we will review the broader sexual and gender minority research strategic plan for NIH. We will review the goals and objectives and describe the implementation of such to date. We will also discuss public comment on the strategic plan, describe recent funding opportunity announcements, and review next steps.

SSRPCB-4 Publishing Qualitative Research: Common Pitfalls and Solutions
Laura Abrams, PhD (University of California, Los Angeles)

This interactive session will help workshop participants strengthen their skills in publishing qualitative research articles in peer reviewed journals. The session will focus on issues including journal choice, research questions, use of theory, methodology (i.e., design, sampling, data collection, rigor, and analysis), presentation and discussion of results, limitations, and crafting responses to peer reviewers. The workshop is suitable for doctoral students, early career researchers, scholars who are new to qualitative methods, and those currently preparing qualitative manuscripts for publication.

SSRPCB-5 Research Capacity Building with Transgender and Gender Expansive Youth
Matthew D. Chin, PhD (Fordham University), Milo Inglehart, BA (Harvard University), Alex Kulick, BA (University of California, Santa Barbara), Jama Shelton, PhD (Hunter College), Leo Sheng Thornton (University of Michigan), Phoebe VanCleefe (True Colors Fund), Laura Wernick, PhD (Fordham University)

Trans and gender expansive young people are finding innovative ways to resist the multiple and overlapping institutionalized challenges they face and to carve out meaningful lives for themselves. They do so despite their increased risk for harassment, abuse, criminalization, homelessness, and negative mental health and academic outcomes compared to the general population. This interactive workshop will 1) provide an overview on trans and gender expansive youth research, including its strengths and pitfalls. It will especially highlight the differences between trans and gender expansive youth and other members of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, queer, questioning (LGBTQQ) and similarly identified communities. It will further emphasize the diversity of experiences among trans and gender expansive youth, with particular attention to the experiences of trans and gender expansive youth of color; 2) discuss recent trends and strategies for successful intersectional community-based participatory research; 3) discuss trans and gender expansive youth research priority areas; and 4) identify ways to address cisgenderism and cis-heterosexism throughout our scholarship. Workshop presenters include trans and gender expansive young researchers and collaborators.

BOSTON COLLEGE
WELCOMES OUR NEW DEAN GAUTAM N. YADAMA

Boston College is in the vanguard of institutions thinking differently about how to engage, collaborate, and innovate with the most vulnerable in solution-focused social work research. At BCSSW, we are strengthening social work research and practice through collaborations with economics, neuroscience, nursing, public health, education, environmental science, law, and entrepreneurship.

We are forging collaborations with communities and our most vulnerable to design and deploy innovative interventions for social change. Our initiatives on social innovation, Latino leadership, immigrant integration, aging & work, and RISE3 reflect our transdisciplinary and translational social work research and practice that is place based.

CONGRATULATIONS TO THE 2017 GADE AWARD WINNERS!

GADE STUDENT AWARD FOR SOCIAL WORK RESEARCH

The GADE Student Award for Social Work Research is given to an individual doctoral student or collaborative group of students, whose published (or in press) scholarship advances scientific inquiry in social work or social welfare. The research should serve as a model for scientific rigor, and show high potential to impact social work practice, policy, or research.

Stephanie Grace Prost, MSW
Doctoral Candidate
College of Social Work, Florida State University

GADE AWARD FOR EXCELLENCE IN MENTORING OF DOCTORAL STUDENTS

The GADE Award for Excellence in Mentoring of Doctoral Students is given to a faculty member at a GADE member organization who has made extraordinary and sustained contributions to the scholarly development of social work doctoral students. This award recognizes that mentoring is an essential component of doctoral education and that mentoring helps to shape the future direction of the field of social work. Faculty distinguished by this award display a strong commitment to, and effectiveness in, mentoring social work doctoral students.

Stephanie A. Robert, MSW, Ph.D.
Professor and Director
School of Social Work
University of Wisconsin-Madison

Honorable Mention
Paschal Ross-Sheriff, Ph.D.
School of Social Work
Howard University

GADE awardees will be honored at the GADE Reception on Saturday, January 14th at 7:30 pm
The Society for Social Work and Research (SSWR) will be holding the “Meet the Scientist” Luncheon to be held at the SSWR 21st Annual Conference in New Orleans, LA. This special session provides a forum for early career scholars and doctoral students to talk and interact with established senior scholars who are leaders in social work research and the Society. Early career scholars and doctoral students will have the opportunity to ask questions about career development, challenges in the field, research initiatives, and where the field might be heading. Each senior scholar will be seated at a table with up to 6 early career scholars and doctoral students.

Invited Journal Editors’ Workshop I: Publishing Research in Peer-Reviewed Journals: Talk with the Editors

Jeffrey M. Jenson, PhD (University of Denver), Sophia Dziegielewski, PhD (University of Cincinnati), Mark E. Courtney, PhD (University of Chicago), Bruce A. Thyer, PhD (Florida State University), James Herbert Williams, PhD (University of Denver)

This symposium brings together a panel of editors from five generalist research journals in social work: Journal of Social Service Research, Journal of the Society for Social Work and Research, Research on Social Work Practice, Social Service Review, and Social Work Research. The editors will describe their respective journals, offer guidance on submissions, explain the editorial decision-making process, and advise on the process of creating publishable articles. Time will be provided for questions, comments, and suggestions from the audience and responses from the Editors.

36 Opening Plenary Session: Nothing About Us, Without Us: Youth Speak Out About What Researchers Should Know About Youth
Gerald Mallon, DSW (Hunter College)

Irrespective of complex, but necessary, IRB issues, engaging youth in research inquiry requires unique skills that some researchers may not have fully considered. The engagement of youth as partners in research and evaluation efforts is relatively new. The underlying philosophy of the positive youth development movement has influenced scholars and practitioners to include youth as partners in the design and implementation of research involving issues that affect their lives. Engaging youth in research and evaluation not only generates useful knowledge for communities and individuals but also provides opportunities for the development and empowerment of youth participants, leading to benefits for young people, organizations, the broader community, and the research process. Utilizing the voices of young people from child welfare, juvenile justice, and school systems, this plenary will facilitate a dialogue between young people and researchers to encourage and provoke thoughtful examination of the core issues that researchers should consider when engaging youth in scholarly inquiry.

Explore the Possibilities

POWERFUL. IMMERSIVE. DEEPLY MOVING.

That’s how Columbia MSW alumna Di Cao described her reactions to a film commissioned by the United Nations about a Syrian refugee camp in Jordan. She could almost reach out and touch a young Syrian girl as she followed her to school and to her makeshift tent. Di saw the bakery where flatbreads were prepared every day and the makeshift gym where the young boys wrestle. By the end of the film, she felt a sense of solidarity with the children. Their concerns were her concerns. All of this happened at her second-year field placement at the UN’s Sustainable Development Goals (SDG) Action Campaign.

Extraordinary. Transformative. Leading Edge. That’s how Di Cao describes her Columbia graduate-school education. She is now back in her native China, working to apply her social work skills on behalf of vulnerable populations.

Community is our legacy

For nearly a century, we have made a difference. We began as a few community leaders and evolved into a center of excellence for social work education, research, practice, and collaboration. We challenged ourselves to meet the social inequities of the day and promised to be steadfast tomorrow.

We are students and alumni.
We are faculty and staff.
We are advocates and clinicians.
We are leaders and supporters.
We are community and we are Virginia Commonwealth University School of Social Work.

ENSURE HEALTHY DEVELOPMENT FOR ALL YOUTH
Leadership across the profession

Applied intervention researchers, policy makers, prolific publishers. Our award-winning faculty are making a difference in today's most pressing social issues such as substance abuse, eldercare, interpersonal violence, child welfare, mental health care, international social work, school settings, and supporting military families.

Our faculty members are respected and recognized scholars and entrepreneurs who produce cutting-edge research. In 2015, social work faculty received $8 million in grant funding.

Consistently top-ranked

US News & World Report ranks our School among the nation's top ten graduate social work programs.

Innovative MSW curriculum

Full-time, three-year distance education, advanced standing, dual-degree, and certificate programs are offered. Two concentrations—community management and policy practice; and direct practice—allow students flexibility and choice in their curriculum.

With our comprehensive field education program and superior LCSW exam pass rate, graduates are well-prepared for social work practice.

Research-focused Doctoral Program

As the profession's future leaders, our doctoral students conduct research on progressive social interventions and disseminate their work through scholarship and teaching.

Laina Y. Bay-Cheng, PhD (State University of New York at Buffalo), Stephanie A. Robert, PhD (University of Wisconsin-Madison), Gina M. Samuels, PhD (University of Chicago), Renee Spencer, EdD, Grace Gowdy, MSW (Boston University)

Building student and early career scholars’ research capacity is not predicated on the one-way transmission and passive receipt of concrete skills and knowledge. Instead, research capacity development occurs through the ongoing exchange and refinement of questions, ideas, and strategies. Mentors play an undeniably critical role this process, serving as a primary conduit to essential tangible resources (funding, space, equipment, supplies) and equally vital intangible opportunities (knowledge and training, presentations and publications, professional networking and career advice). Ideally, this relationship is mutually fruitful, insofar as it stimulates new ideas and results in shared products, and mutually meaningful, insofar as it provides mentors with outlets for generativity and mentees with sources of guidance. The expert insight from this session’s invited participants will help ground and guide a roundtable conversation of the mechanics, chemistry, and promise of mentoring for social work research and researchers. Specific points for discussion include: mentoring – and being mentored – as a skillset; diverse forms and types of mentors, including natural mentors and peer mentors; the impact of mentoring networks on the lives and careers of minority-status researchers; and the intellectual and professional value of mentoring across disciplines.

Lenna Nepomnyaschy, PhD (Rutgers University), Darcey Merritt, PhD (New York University), Former Rep. Edolphus Towns (NY), Congresswoman Karen Bass (CA), Charles Lewis, PhD (Congressional Research Institute for Social Work and Policy). (Additional panelists TBD)

As social work scholars, we have a responsibility to use our knowledge and skill set to advance a democratic and inclusive society. We recognize that our academic training may not sufficiently prepare us to effectively participate in the political process, especially in these times. This panel focuses on concrete action steps that social work researchers and scholars can take to push back against the racist, xenophobic, and anti-democratic rhetoric that dominated the election and that we fear has become normalized in this post-election period. The panel also focuses on strategic approaches to countering policy alternatives that lack legitimacy on moral and evidentiary grounds while encouraging healthy debate of diverse policy options, including shaping a bold narrative in a manner that aligns with our social work values and ethics. (This panel is one of three made possible with financial support from the schools of social work at Rutgers University, New York University, and University of Chicago.)
12:30 pm - 1:30 pm

Catalano, PhD (University of Washington), Kimberly A. Bender, PhD (University of Denver), Valerie Shapiro, PhD (University of California, Berkeley), Mark W. Fraser, PhD (University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill)

Behavioral health problems in childhood and adolescence take a heavy individual, social, and economic toll on millions of lives. These problems range widely—from anxiety and depression to alcohol, tobacco, and drug abuse; delinquent and violent behavior; dropping out of school; and risky sexual activity and unwanted pregnancies. For decades, the approach to behavioral health problems was to treat them only after they were identified – at a high and ongoing cost to young people, families, and communities. Strong evidence from the past three decades indicates that we can prevent many behavioral health problems before they emerge. In this session, members of the Coalition for the Promotion of Behavioral Health discuss advances in prevention science and outline the goals and strategies of Unleashing the Power of Prevention, an action plan aimed at increasing the use of tested and effective preventive interventions for young people from birth to age 24. Unleashing the Power of Prevention is a central component of the American Academy of Social Work and Social Welfare's Grand Challenge of Ensure Healthy Development for all Youth.

118 Invited Journal Editors’ Workshop II: Preservation Hall Studio 9
Forum on Publishing Qualitative Research
Sondra J. Fogel, PhD (University of South Florida), Noel Busch-Armendariz, PhD (University of Texas at Austin), Jane F. Gilgun, PhD, LICSW (University of Minnesota-Twin Cities), Susan P. Robbins, PhD (University of Houston), Karen M. Staller, PhD (University of Michigan-Ann Arbor)

This workshop is for conference participants seeking to publish qualitative research and scholarly work in social work journals. The workshop brings together a distinguished panel of editors, former editors, and researchers from four journals: Qualitative Social Work, Affilia, Journal of Social Work Education, and Families in Society. These journals are highly regarded in the profession and share commitments to excellence in social work research and publication. In this session, the editors describe the aim of their respective journals and the editorial decision-making process. Most important, they will create a discussion with participants about what constitutes a publishable qualitative study that influences practice and policy. Before the program starts, participants will be asked to write their publishing questions on 3x5 cards; the chair will collect the cards and sort them during the presentation and use these to facilitate discussion. In this workshop, the editors contribute to the scholarly development of the participants by building skills related to successful publication. The editors will discuss several issues, including how to match topics to specific journals, review processes, features of articles they’ve accepted for publication, and how to address the implications of their research for practice and policy.

As social workers, we have an ethical responsibility to the broader society to create equitable access to resources and opportunities for all, especially for vulnerable and oppressed groups. The racism, xenophobia, misogyny, anti-Semitism and heterosexism stemming from this election reinforce and exacerbate long-standing injustices and structural oppression, which threaten everything that social work champions. This session is designed to bring together social work colleagues to share existing advocacy efforts at schools of social work and to discuss opportunities to build a national social work strategy for dismantling structural oppression. The session organizers will facilitate the discussion, but the session is designed to be participatory in nature and involve all attendees. (This panel is one of three made possible with financial support from the schools of social work at Rutgers University, New York University, and University of Chicago.)

Abstract:
Low-income or resource-poor, urban and rural environments present a number of risk factors leading to deleterious outcomes for youth of color, including school truancy and dropout, compromised physical and behavior health statuses including substance abuse, sexual risk-taking behaviors, or gang involvement. Intervention programs to address these risk factors are plentiful; yet, there is some ways to go to ensure the effectiveness of these approaches across a host of outcomes for youth of color. We will host a panel discussion, via a 90-minute talk show format with follow-up Q & A, to share in the collective wisdom of key scholars whose research addresses important challenges in intervention science and programming targeting youth of color. In particular, this panel will:
1. Integrate the positive and successful programs that promote development in youth of color and learn how these existing programs can be further innovative to promote sustained success;
2. Explore how existing programs might accommodate different environments and communities (suburban, rural, immigrant/refugee, “ethnic”);
3. Identify the problems, whether environmental, social, or on the part of systematic failures in the program itself, that hinder the success of youth of color;
4. Promote public, academic, and professional advocacy for successful and positive existing programs through engaged exploration and dialogue.

222 Annual Social Policy Forum: Poverty, Carondelet Child Maltreatment, and Implications for Child Welfare Policy & Services
Lawrence M. Berger, PhD (University of Wisconsin-Madison), Stacie LeBlanc (Children's Hospital)

Research has established a strong correlation between poverty and both child maltreatment and child protective services (CPS) involvement. Recent evidence suggests that these associations are in fact causal. In this second year of the SSWR Social Policy Forum, faculty researcher Lawrence Berger and practitioner Stacie LeBlanc have a conversation about the implications of this finding for child welfare policy and services. In a combination of presentation, dialogue, and audience Q&A, they consider what engaging in “poverty-informed” child welfare practice would mean for the child welfare system and for the reduction of racial disparities throughout it.
Strategizing Social Work Practice with Immigrant Populations in the Current Political Climate

Amy Thompson, MPA (University of Texas at Austin), Monica Faulkner, PhD, LMSW (University of Texas at Austin), Hannah Szlyk, LCSW (University of Texas at Austin), Ken Borelli, MSW, ACSW (former deputy director of the Santa Clara County Department of Family and Children's Services, Ann E. Webb, J.D., LMSW (Moderator) (University of Houston). (Additional panelists TBD)

The incoming administration has promised aggressive changes to US immigration policy within its first 100 days, including: the deportation of millions and the elimination of pathways to legal immigration for millions more. Whether and how these promises will be implemented is uncertain. Social work research identifies the negative impacts of uncertain legal status on immigrant youth and families. The literature demonstrates that immigration-related stressors can adversely impact the mental and emotional health of immigrant and first-generation children, including the presence of depression, anxiety, and suicidality. A panel of researchers, clinicians, and students will consider the material and psychological implications of a Trump presidency on immigrants, especially undocumented and mixed-status families and youth, and identify strategies for social workers to pursue their professional duty to empower and advocate on behalf of affected populations through research, practice, and policy work. (This panel is one of three made possible with financial support from the schools of social work at Rutgers University, New York University, and University of Chicago.)

Navigating the Academic Job Market
Ericka M. Lewis, LMSW (Washington University in Saint Louis), Karla Arroyo, MSW (University of Utah), Sean Joe, PhD, LMSW (Washington University in Saint Louis), Megan R. Holmes, PhD (Case Western Reserve University), Anne K. Hughes, PhD (Michigan State University), Byron J. Powell, PhD (University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill), Gina Fedock, PhD (University of Chicago)

Please join us for food, conversation, and networking. This year’s doctoral student panel will include panelists at various stages of their careers to discuss navigating the job market. Sean Joe is currently the Benjamin E. Youngdahl Professor of Social Development at the Brown School of Social Work at Washington University in St. Louis. Dr. Joe has previously held faculty positions at the University of Michigan and University of Pennsylvania after completing a post-doctoral appointment. Megan Holmes is an Assistant Professor of Social Work in the Mandel School of Applied Social Sciences at Case Western Reserve University. Dr. Holmes teaches a doctoral level course that prepares students for a successful academic job search. Anne Hughes is an Associate Professor at the Michigan State School of Social Work and is the author of the award-winning article “Being the Diversity Hire: Negotiating Identity in an Academic Job Search.” Byron Powell is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Health Policy and Management at the UNC Gillings School of Global Public Health in Chapel Hill, North Carolina. Prior to transitioning to UNC in 2015, Dr. Powell was a postdoctoral researcher at the University of Pennsylvania’s Perelman School of Medicine. Gina Fedock is an Assistant Professor at the University of Chicago School of Social Service Administration and graduated with her PhD from Michigan State University in 2015. The conversation will be moderated by current doctoral students, Karla Arroyo (University of Utah) and Ericka Lewis (Washington University in St. Louis).

224 Grand Challenges Roundtable: Advancing the Grand Challenges: Pathways and Issues
Richard P. Barth, PhD (University of Maryland at Baltimore), Marilyn Flynn, PhD (University of Southern California), Michael Sherraden, PhD (Washington University in Saint Louis), Edwina Uehara, PhD (University of Washington)

The Grand Challenges represent an opportunity to impact intractable social problems over the next decade by accelerating social work science, educational innovation, and new forms of practitioner engagement. Since the formal launch of the Grand Challenges in January 2016, an unanticipated and widening variety of responses have appeared across the academic community. This has opened new possibilities for engagement and has demonstrated the power of the Grand Challenges to harness students, universities, governments, professional organizations, and foundations in the overarching interest of social well-being. This panel will help to summarize the variety of initiatives that have emerged, including early examples of progress in development of resources and public attention. Possibilities for participation in the Grand Challenges effort will be identified for institutions of different sizes and disciplinary configurations. Issues in future implementation will be explored, including implications for scientific organization of our field, doctoral education, collaboration with practitioners, practice research networks, and social policy. The distinctive responsibilities of universities, the American Academy of Social Work and Social Welfare, and the Society for Social Work and Research will be examined, together with the question of how success will ultimately be measured.

225 Invited Symposium III: School, University, and Community Collaborations to Build Resilience and Improve Children's Health: The Homewood Approach
John M. Wallace, PhD (University of Pittsburgh), Fred Brown, MSW (Homewood Children’s Village), Esohe Osai (Pitt Assisted Communities and Schools), James P. Huguley, EdD (University of Pittsburgh)

The focus of this session is on how school, community, and university partners can collaborate to support high needs communities in efforts to ameliorate and ultimately eliminate disparities in children’s health. The presenter, Professor John Wallace, School of Social Work, Katz School of Business, and Department of Sociology – University of Pittsburgh, will discuss current collaborations between the University of Pittsburgh’s Pitt-Assisted Community Schools (PACS) program, the Homewood Children's Village Community Schools Initiative, and three collaborating Title 1 public schools in the Homewood neighborhood of Pittsburgh. The session will detail various aspects of, leading, designing and executing this collaboration that leverages community school supports and university resources in order to provide a pipeline of full-service programming that promotes resilience and health among one of the city’s highest need populations.

226 RCDC Research Roots & Wings Roundtable 2: Spreading Wings through Alternative Dissertations
Elizabeth Lightfoot, PhD (University of Minnesota-Twin Cities), Margaret Adamek, PhD (Indiana University), Beverly M. Black, PhD (University of Texas at Arlington), Laina Y. Bay-Cheng, PhD (State University of New York at Buffalo), Cynthia Franklin, PhD (University of Texas at Austin), Sydney Hans, PhD (University of Chicago), Peter Maramaldi, PhD, MPH, LCSW (Simmons College)

The purpose of this roundtable, co-sponsored by SSWR's Research Capacity Development Committee and the Group for the Advancement of Doctoral Education in Social Work (GADE), will be to discuss how the dissertation fits within the shifting landscape of social work research, and whether alternative dissertation formats might be an option for aligning social work doctoral education with twenty-first century social work research. The roundtable presenters will first discuss the strengths and limitations of the traditional dissertation in the current context. Many other fields have embraced alternative dissertation formats, and the alternative dissertation is the focus of much debate in national organizations, such as the Council on Graduate Schools. The roundtable presenters will discuss examples of the range of alternative dissertation formats, explore how these formats fit with the research capacity development needs of social work PhD students, and discuss implications of alternative dissertation formats for twenty-first century social work research. The roundtable will provide an opportunity for a lively discourse among attendees, and for doctoral students, doctoral educators and others to share their own perspectives on the future of the doctoral dissertation in social work education.

Rev. Jeffrey Brown

Rev. Jeffrey Brown was one of the key architects behind the “Boston Miracle,” which saw the violent crime rate among youth plummet by 79% over a decade. Today, he works with faith groups, cities, government, and police to stop gang violence as the president of RECAP and co-founder of My City at Peace. He speaks on “collaborative leadership,” community building, and what it takes to institute real change in organizations of all stripes.

At TED 2015, Rev. Jeffrey Brown’s keynote garnered a standing ovation—and has since been viewed over 1 million times. Rev. Brown is currently the president of RECAP, which stands for Rebuilding Every Community Around Peace. He is also a co-founder of the Boston Ten Point Coalition, a faith-based group that was an integral part of the famous “Boston Miracle,” during which the city experienced a 79% decline in violent crime among youth from 1990 to 1999. The efforts also spawned countless urban collaborative efforts in subsequent years, and was widely covered in the press.

Rev. Brown consults municipalities and police departments (and policing initiatives) nationwide on issues around youth violence and community mobilization. He helps rebuild trust between neighborhoods and police departments, speaking with officers to strengthen their ties to the communities they serve. He has worked with the US State Department on Countering Violent Extremism (CVE) initiatives, based on his nationally recognized success with developing robust violence prevention and intervention strategies. As part of the Society for Organizational Learning North America, Rev. Brown also assists the World Bank, IMF, and IFC with senior leadership development and learning, teaching cutting-edge models for leadership, problem solving, flexibility, and adaptability.

As co-founder of My City at Peace—a community-based, collaborative organization that builds alliances between conflicting constituencies to find peace and end violence—Rev. Brown has also been working with housing authorities to rebuild communities in distressed areas and avoid the more damaging effects of gentrification. In order to attract buyers, while still retaining low-income residents, Brown argues for a combination of market-rate, affordable, and Section 8 housing.
