JSSWR is an official publication of the Society for Social Work and Research and published by the University of Chicago Press.
Congratulations to Wendy Haight
2018 Aaron Rosen Lecturer

“Understanding Stigmatization and Resistance Through Ethnographic Research: Implications for Practice”

Professor Haight is the Gamble-Skogmo Chair in Child Welfare and Youth Policy. Her research focuses on better understanding and supporting vulnerable children and families, especially those involved in public child welfare systems.

We are proud to have Professor Haight represent our school, particularly as we celebrate the 100th anniversary of its founding.
Please join USC College of Social Work Dean and President of AASWSW, Sarah Gehlert, at “Whither Social Work in its Second Century?” on Sunday, January 14 from 1:15 pm-5:30 pm.

This symposium is organized by Social Service Review, in collaboration with the American Academy of Social Work and Social Welfare (AASWSW) and the Society for Social Work and Research (SSWR), to honor the 100th anniversary of the inaugural 1917 meeting of the National Conference of Social Work.

Columbia University’s School of Social Work faculty continue to advance the research agenda of social work, social justice, and global social welfare. Here are three recent examples:

Willma and Albert Musher Professor of Social Work Nabila El-Bassel and Professor Neeraj Kaushal are stewarding a Columbia University-wide initiative called ASPIRE: Advancing Solutions in Policy, Implementation, Research, and Engagement for Refugees, focusing on Syrian refugees in Jordan and Turkey.

Assistant Professor Desmond Patton is collaborating with Columbia University’s Data Science Institute on computational data-collection methods to examine how and why gang violence, trauma, grief, and identity are expressed on social media and the impact this form of expression has on well-being for low-income youth of color.

Mr. Vincent Schiraldi, who joined the School of Social Work in Fall 2017 as a senior research scientist, will bring his years of experience in criminal and juvenile justice—of having served as Director of Juvenile Corrections in Washington, D.C., and as the Commissioner of the New York City Department of Probation—to bear on the school’s curriculum offerings as well as on a university-wide research agenda.

The ASU School of Social Work is committed to promoting social, political, and economic justice, with special emphasis on populations of the Southwest. The School prepares professional social work practitioners and scholars who are enhancing individual, family and group problem-solving capacities, maximizing human potential, and creating a more just and humane society.

Promoting community-engaged research: new grants

$7 million National Institutes of Health grant funds ASU Center of Excellence on Minority Health and Health Disparities

The new center advances the work of the Southwest Interdisciplinary Research Center and brings together researchers from various disciplines such as social work, nutrition, health and sociology to advance programs aimed at reducing chronic disease, with a particular focus on minority populations of the Southwest.

Flavio Marsiglia, Regent’s Professor and director of the Global Center for Applied Health Research is principal investigator for the new NIH award.

U.S. Department of Justice funds Tucson BCJI initiative

Mary Ellen Brown and Katie Stalker, both assistant professors, have been awarded approximately $1 million to investigate social drivers of crime and community-driven solutions.

The Tucson Byrne Criminal Justice Innovation Initiative aims to transform the Oracle area from a poverty-stricken, dangerous section of the state through positive youth development, cross-sector partnerships and collaborative efforts to promote health and well-being for residents.
Rutgers School of Social Work prepares the researchers of tomorrow.

Through innovative research, UNC School of Social Work is improving social work practice and creating positive change.

In the past year, we’ve implemented a $5 million project to fight human trafficking. We hosted the first TEDxUNC Salon event on child and maternal health. Thirty experts from eight countries launched our new Global Social Development Institute. Our experts in eldercare, interpersonal violence, child welfare and other issues helped shape policies to improve the lives of our world’s most vulnerable individuals.

What’s next? Look for updates from our Collaboration for Social Justice and Racial Equity, the expansion of our Jordan Institute for Families, and development of new social interventions (with projects that serve the unique needs of incarcerated persons with mental illness, military families, refugees and other groups).

The Concentration in Clinical Scholarship

A unique program that prepares graduates for the challenges of clinical teaching, scholarship, and research, as well as leadership roles in advanced clinical social work practice.

The Clinical Scholarship concentration allowed me to dive deeper into my clinical training and gave me the knowledge needed to both teach clinical classes with confidence as well as engage in clinical research in a meaningful and knowledgeable way.
- Laurel Hicks, 2017 graduate

The Clinical Scholarship concentration has provided me the unique opportunity to return to and deepen my clinical practice skills while at the same time, developing my role and work as a social work researcher.
