Early Career Reviewer Program: Request for Applications

Deadline: September 30, 2022

Overview

The Journal of the Society for Social Work and Research (JSSWR) Early Career Reviewer Program provides an opportunity for scholars early in their academic careers to work with senior mentors who have extensive publishing and editorial experience. The program provides mentored experiences in the review of up to three manuscripts per year over a 2-year period. Both the Early Career Reviewer (ECR) and their mentor will be recognized at the annual SSWR conference and in the journal's annual acknowledgement of service.

Eligibility Criteria

Individuals in postdoctoral appointments and appointed faculty members within 3 years of graduation are eligible to apply. All applicants must have a doctoral degree in social work or a related discipline. Applicants should select a mentor in advance of the application process and submit the mentor's name and credentials, along with a letter of interest. Mentors must have experience reviewing manuscripts and publication records that demonstrate knowledge of journal publication practices. All ECRs (and their mentors) must maintain a membership in the Society for Social Work and Research (SSWR).

Expectations

ECRs and mentors will, together, review up to three manuscripts per year over a 2-year period. Terms will begin on November 1, 2022. Completed reviews are to be submitted to the journal using the Editorial Manager system. An introductory meeting and Q & A session will be scheduled prior to the first reviewer assignments.
